International Student Employment

Note: Federal Work-Study (FWS) is an employment program for Federal Aid eligible students who qualify. To be eligible for Federal Work-Study you must be a citizen of the U.S., a U.S. National, or a U.S. Permanent Resident who has an alien Registration card.

I. On Campus Student Employment

The primary type of International Student Employment is On Campus Student Employment (OCSE).

A. There are number of ways of going about finding a job on campus:

i. Inquire in person to your department of studies.
ii. Inquire in person to the various departments and libraries on campus.
iii. Check the numerous public notice boards for postings on campus.

The important thing to do is:
Proactively seek out job opportunities. Rarely will a job make itself available.
Always have a current resume available.

iv. OCSE positions are listed online at www.collegecentral.com/newschool and rarely at the Student Employment Office. The following is the procedure for registration:

1. Go to www.collegecentral.com/newschool
2. Click on 'Students'.
3. Read instructions making sure they apply to you and then click on 'Register Now' towards bottom of screen.
4. To create your Access ID, you may type up to 12 characters using letters, numbers or the underscore character that you can remember for future use.
5. For your password you must choose your own unique password. Remember your password for future use.

Note: This registration only enables you to search for jobs online. In order to apply for jobs online you must post your resume. Employers will look at resumes and call suitable candidates for their positions.

B. Once employed, (and in order to receive a paycheck), an International Student MUST complete this process:

i. Apply for a Social Security Card

1. Must have offer of employment.
2. Obtain letter from employer stating nature of student's job.
3. Bring letter from employer to ISS and request a letter from ISS stating that the student is eligible for employment.
4. Bring both letters to one of the Social Security Administrations offices with I-20 and passport.

Note: It usually takes around 2 weeks for students to receive the card.

*The New School will pay students only as long as they have proof of their application for a Social Security Card.

ii. Fill out the Foreign National Information Collection Form (from Human Resources Office, 79 Fifth Avenue, 18th floor New York, NY 10003)

1. Copies of the following documents must accompany the form:
    a. Social Security Card or a letter of proof that you have applied for a card
    b. Passport
    c. Visa documents
    d. I-94 Departure Record (front and back)
    e. I-20: Certificate of Eligibility for Nonimmigrant (F-1) Student Status or DC2019: Certificate of Eligibility for Exchange Visitor (J-1 Visa)

2. Student will be contacted via e-mail to come and sign their tax forms when ready.

Note: The student will be paid only after their paperwork is completed and processed.

3. Direct Deposit:
    a. Payroll strongly recommends students to apply for Direct Deposit (the form can be picked up at the Human Resources Office). This will ensure that your pay is automatically sent to your account and immediately available to you upon payday.

II. Resident Advisor Positions

Resident Advisors live in the dormitories on campus, organize and plan educational, social, cultural and recreational activities, and offer one-on-one counseling and resident advising. You must have a commitment to being available for evening meetings and residence hall activities. Students who have lived in New School housing will, in most cases, be better qualified for this position than those who have not.

III. Graduate Departmental Scholarship and Assistantship[1]

A. The New School offers scholarships to many of our graduate international students. All graduate students will be considered for scholarship support at the same time that they are being considered for admission into their program. The New School will automatically notify you of an award on your acceptance letter or through a separate financial aid award letter soon after you are admitted to the school.

B. Every academic department that offers assistantships determines them differently. In addition, not every academic department has assistantship opportunities available. Assistantship awards are made to students after they start the program and are paid directly to the student. Speak with your academic department about the assistantship application process.

IV. Off-Campus Employment

A. There are four types Off-Campus Employment available to International Students in F-1 Status:

However to be eligible to work off campus and receive payment (with the exception of an internship with an international organization), an international student must be enrolled full-time for at least one academic year (two full semesters). In addition, an International Student Advisor or USCIS must authorize students in writing and via SEVIS before the first day of employment. The four types of off-campus employment include:

[1] Excerpt from Student Financial Services webpage: http://www.newschool.edu/studentservices/financialaid/apply_intl.aspx

i. Curricular Practical Training: This type of employment must be an integral and critical part of your program of study, such as required fieldwork, or a for-credit internship. This employment must be no more than 20 hours per week while classes are in session. Students may work full-time (40 hours per week) with proper authorization during vacations.

Note: Students must be in F-1 status for one full academic year before they can be eligible.

ii. Optional Practical Training: This type of employment must also be directly related to your field of study, but it is limited to a maximum of 12 full months for each higher degree. (In other words, if you complete an undergraduate degree, you can do 12 months of Optional Practical Training, and then after completing a graduate degree, you can do another 12 months of Optional Practical Training). Students usually use this type of work authorization after completing their programs of study, but some also do Optional Practical Training before completing their program of study. You may apply for this benefit up to 60 days after completing your program of study.

Note: English as a Second Language (ESL) students are not eligible for Practical Training.

iii. Internship with an international organization: Employment with a recognized international organization within the meaning of the International Organization Immunities Act (examples include the United Nations, the World Bank, etc.).

Note: Students do not need to wait a full academic year before they are eligible to apply to the Department of Homeland Security for this type of authorization.

iv. Severe economic hardship: Employment due to unforeseen and severe economic difficulties may be authorized in extreme situations. Circumstances may include a loss of financial aid, substantial changes in the value of currency, unexpected financial difficulties of your sponsor, unexpected medical bills, or large increases in the cost of tuition or living expenses.

Note: Students must be in F-1 status for one full academic year before they can apply.

Note: Again, in all cases but on-campus employment, be sure to obtain written authorization from International Student Services or USCIS first.

B. There are two types of Off-Campus Employment available to International Students in J-1 Status:

i. Academic training: This type of employment must be critical and integral to your academic program of study. You are allowed one month of Academic Training for each month you are enrolled full time in your program of study. It is limited to a maximum of 18 full months for your entire academic career. (In other words, if you complete an undergraduate degree and then a graduate degree the total Academic Training permitted is still only 18 full months.) However, once students finish all requirements for their PhD, they are eligible for up to 36 months of Academic Training. Most students use this type of authorization after completing their programs of study, but some students may also do Academic Training before graduation. Talk to your International Student Advisor to discuss your options.

ii. Severe economic hardship: Employment due to unforeseen and severe economic difficulties may be authorized in extreme situations. Circumstances may include a loss of financial aid, substantial changes in the value of currency, unexpected financial difficulties of your sponsor, unexpected medical bills, or large increases in the cost of tuition or living expenses.

Note for J-2 Dependent employment: Your J-2 dependent(s) may apply to the Department of Homeland Security to get authorization to work provided that the purpose of the employment is not to support you as the J–1, but to enhance the J-2's participation in the Exchange Visitor Program—and also take part in cultural and educational exchange.

Note: For more information on On-Campus and Off-Campus Employment, CPT and OPT, please see Study in the States' guide to Working in the States.

Scholarship and Funding Search: Step-by-Step[2]

I. First Step: Begin Your Search

A. Embassy of Country of Origin
Contact your own embassy and find out what funding is available for studying abroad. Embassies tend to have more one year stipends than funding for multi-year students.

B. Over-Seas Educational Advisors (OSEAS)
You may want to contact an OSEAS from your country. A list of advisors with contact information can be found at: http://apps.collegeboard.com/cbsearch/center/searchOverseasAdvCenter.jsp

C. Explore American communities affiliated with your country of origin Examples: Polish Americans, Arab Americans, Chinese Americans, Jewish Americans. They may know of financial opportunities specific to people from that ethnic group. An affiliated student club may be a good resource for information on this subject.

D. Loan Options
International students may qualify for private credit-based loans to meet educational expenses. Most programs require borrowers to have a credit-worthy U.S. citizen co-signer. Students are encouraged to search the internet for private student loan opportunities. We caution potential borrowers to make themselves familiar with the terms and conditions of the loans they are applying for before signing a promissory note or loan funds being disbursed.

E. Internal Scholarships

i. The New School provides a generous program of scholarships and fellowships for degree students based on need, merit or a combination of the two. These funds, ranging from several hundred dollars to full-tuition, do not require repayment and are primarily scholarships applied towards your tuition costs.

ii. Undergraduate students are awarded based upon the data contained in the application (FAFSA or the online International Student Scholarship Application) and admissions credentials. To be considered for institutional scholarships, undergraduate students should complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) (if eligible) or the International Student Scholarship Application (depending on the program in which they are enrolling).

iii. Graduate students are automatically considered for scholarship funds upon entry into the university. Scholarship recipients are notified of their award by either their program or a Student Financial Services award letter soon after being admitted. In general, graduate students are not required to complete a scholarship application in order to be considered for scholarship funding. New School for Social Research students are required to fill out a separate scholarship application within their program for consideration.

[2] Prepared with assistance from the University of Michigan International Center and the Foundation Center websites.

iv. Listings of Scholarships are available at individual websites of the different departments. A student may submit a letter with their Scholarship Application Form about a specific scholarship they are interested in receiving.

F. Your Department:

i. Talk to your peers, students who are interested in your area of interest, or students from your country of origin who have been here for a while (students from many countries have their own associations). This can be a wonderful source of information that is specifically relevant to you.
ii. Chair of your dissertation committee
iii. Faculty (other than your chair)
iv. Administrator of grants/fellowships: most large departments have an administrator who is in charge of fellowships, etc. This person knows what is available and what will be coming in.
v. Constantly monitor the departmental bulletin boards regarding fellowships, grants, research assistantships, etc. Read your departmental newsletter and/or e-mail messages since these are also ways to find out about funding opportunities. Ask your departmental secretary to keep you informed of any notices about fellowships or grants.

G. List of External Scholarships and Fellowships

i. See list on page 13.

II. Second Step: Prepare Your Applications

It is important to prepare a professional application. Create a time frame for your application process and be aware of the deadlines for each award. Allow yourself enough time to write several drafts of your portion of the application. Give the people who will be writing your recommendations plenty of time as well.

The following are suggested strategies for the preparation of a funding application:

A. Present your case clearly and concisely.

B. Write a short and long version of your research idea. Most grants request a 4-10 page double-spaced, typed version.

C. Letters of Recommendation:
   i. You will most likely need 3-4 strong letters of recommendation. These letters should be written by professors, a Graduate Student Instructor or supervisor who knows you well. When you request a recommendation, give each person plenty of time to write a quality letter before the due date (at least one month is ideal). They will also need a description of your qualifications for this award, an explanation of the award requirements and a stamped, addressed envelope. If you are planning to ask them for more than one recommendation, suggest that they keep your recommendation on file for future use.

D. Keep a good up-to-date curriculum vitae on hand. It should not be over two pages long unless you have many publications.

E. Make sure your curriculum vitae has a professional appearance. A laser printed CV on good paper is highly advisable.

F. If you are at the dissertation stage, publications and conference papers are helpful.

G. Think creatively. For example, if you have received a Research Assistantship from a department and you need to travel to do your research, can you convert the tuition portion of the grant into funds that you can use for travel? Be very clear about what benefits the department can expect from this arrangement.

III. Third Step: Preparing Your Application

A. Suggested strategies

i. APPLICATIONS TAKE TIME! Avoid doing your research and writing at the last minute. Remember: You will have to allow for any problems or delays during the application process. It may take longer than expected to get letters of recommendation, copies of grades, etc.

ii. Give a draft to a native English speaker for review – Set up an appointment at the Writing Center. http://www.newschool.edu/admin/writingcenter/default.aspx

iii. Have your writing reviewed for content and presentation at the Career Development Office, located at 79 Fifth Avenue, 5th floor. For walk-in appointments, Call: (212) 229-1324 or Visit: www.newschool.edu/StudentAffairs/careers/services.html

iv. Make sure to mail applications by the due date, even if you have to send them Overnight Mail. Keep copies of each application that you have sent and get a return receipt from the post office.

B. "Strategies to Strengthen Your Application" from the Foundation Center:

i. Certainly, the first step is to start as early as possible in your scholarship seeking process. Pay attention to deadlines noted in the guidelines; each foundation will have its own deadline to apply. It is important for you to do your research well in advance so that you are able to submit your application on time. Sometimes submitting your application well in advance of the deadline will prove advantageous.

ii. Put yourself in the scholarship funder's shoes and think about why s/he might be interested in funding you. Express your unique attributes that are appealing to the funder. Try to be as original as possible.

iii. Make sure your application leaves a strong and positive impression of who you are. Pay attention to vocabularies the funder uses and incorporate them in your application.

iv. Be systematic in following through with all requirements stated in the guidelines. Ensure that your application is complete, and make photocopies of the entire application packet so that you can use the copies as working drafts.

v. Ask someone who has strong grammar and writing skills to review and comment on your application so that you can revise it before submitting it.

vi. Good record keeping is important as well. If you have already applied for federal or state grants or loans, then it is likely that you are already familiar with the paperwork that is required. Depending on the foundation, many of the same documents will be required, including financial statements and tax forms, along with your resume.

vii. If you are granted an interview with the college financial aid officer or a prospective funder, be prepared to discuss your background, academic achievements, future plans, personal value structure, hobbies and interests.

Plus:

1. Find out as many facts as you can about possible funders.
2. Firm up your plan of study, including your financial needs.
3. Creatively assess your unique profile, your personal characteristics and affiliations.
4. Identify funders by matching your profile to their interests.
5. Follow the funder's guidelines carefully.
6. Submit complete applications early and to as many funders as possible.
7. Follow up with the funder as appropriate.

IV. Important Points to Remember

A. Keep informed on all the deadlines and procedures for scholarship and employment applications.

B. Start your search and application process for scholarships with deadlines as early as possible. Job opportunities are listed throughout the year as they become available.

C. Apply for as many different types of financial resources and jobs as you can, since you may not be awarded all of them.

D. Take advantage of the workshops offered by the Career Development Office (212) 229-1324 on resume writing, job searching and interviewing skills. Workshops & special events are held on a range of topics throughout the semester.
See website for further details: http://www.newschool.edu/studentservices/careers/

Also, make sure to attend the ISS International Student Employment Workshop. Check the Student Services event calendar for a list of dates:
http://www.newschool.edu/studentservices/events.aspx

E. During the course of your undergraduate studies, get involved in areas where you have both interest and knowledge. For example, you can volunteer to give presentations on your home country or a topic of interest. This is a good way to obtain public speaking experience, gain confidence and make yourself known to your professors.

F. Network with your professors, academic advisor and other contacts in your field of study to expand your circle of information. In American culture, it is a real advantage to be assertive and verbal. Expand your network of connections whenever you can, be communicative and make your needs known.

V. Emergency Funding

The New School currently provides funds for students experiencing acute emergencies under the Petrie Foundation Student Emergency Fund. Students who need emergency funding may be eligible for assistance under the Carroll and Milton Petrie Student Emergency Fund which is administered by Student Financial Services. The Petrie Student Emergency Fund has been established to provide emergency cash grants to enrolled students in good standing to enable them to remain in school. Examples of emergency expenses covered by the Fund include:

- Temporary loss of student job
- Fire in student living quarters
- Theft of computer, books, clothes or other essentials
- Uninsured medical appointments, accidents, surgery, eyeglasses or essential dental work.
- Travel for death/illness of immediate family member
- Homelessness of student or student dependent
- Loss of children (temporary)
- Purchase of winter coat or interview suit
- Purchase a meal card to eat in university cafeteria
- Transit card to get to school and/or medical appointments

Students should contact Karen Conner-Wilson (connerk@newschool.edu, 212.229.5900 x3655) or Student Services. Ms. Conner-Wilson is the initial point of contact and will facilitate the processing of the student requests.

Students must be enrolled for the current term and be in good academic standing to qualify for assistance under this fund. Students must also be experiencing acute emergencies such as those described above. The purpose of the fund is to address specific instances and is not to be used for non-emergency purposes. Please note that tuition payment or receipts of pending refunds are not considered an emergency under the program guidelines. There is no award maximum, however, awards must be reasonable based on the type of emergency and follow up documentation may be required. This is not a loan program and students are not required to repay the funds.

Note: For more information on International Student Funding, please see the Student Financial Services' Financing Solutions Guide.
