

NSSR Program Assessment, Anthropology Department, M.A.

1. Demonstrate a general knowledge of anthropological fields of study and prominent sites of contention, and be able to articulate differences in approaches.
2. Be able to read texts critically and situate them within a set of analytic interventions and concerns.
3. Be able to write clear, well-organized, scholarly papers, which coherently demonstrate one's knowledge of major subjects or concepts in anthropology.
4. Be able to conceptualize and translate interests into a research problem that is situated within both the anthropological literature and contemporary or historical topics. This research statement should be readily translated into applications for external funding.