Course Description

Policy Analysis is the first course in a three-part sequence required for all students in the urban policy program. It prepares you for the Laboratory in Issue Analysis and the Advanced Seminar, in which students analyze policy and management issues and make recommendations for actual clients. This course is designed to help students develop and apply analytic skills necessary for informed decision making.

Although policy analysis was originally associated with the public sector, it is now important to the nonprofit and corporate sectors as well. Based largely on case discussions, the class will explore the choices facing decision makers in the public and nonprofit sectors in the US and abroad with regard to a wide range of issues, including public health, environmental protection, criminal justice, and transportation. While the course will emphasize the development of analytic skills, it will also discuss alternative models of policy analysis and consider several critical perspectives. The course will culminate in a team project in which students work on a policy problem in preparation for Laboratory in Issue Analysis.

Case studies are used throughout the course to apply analytical techniques to address a broad array of problems situated within different organizational settings. A case describes a real situation in which a public or private official or manager must make a specific decision. The cases summarize the various pressures and considerations that the official or manager must weigh in making the decision and the often incomplete or contradictory information available at the time. Cases challenge you to put yourself in the decisionmaker's place, to grapple with his or her dilemma, and formulate the best possible solution.

The course will be organized to familiarize students with the frameworks and tools of policy analysis, giving special attention to application. We will rely to a significant degree on case analysis and application of theory and tools to problem definition, the design of policy alternatives and their assessment. While students will develop rigorous analytic skills, they will also develop a sense of humility about the limits of their tools and the value of alternative models for decision-making. Further, students will learn how to communicate their findings and recommendations clearly, succinctly and persuasively in written and verbal form. Class attendance, thorough preparation, and active participation will be critical prerequisites for skill development and will figure centrally in the evaluation of student performance.

Course Requirements

In addition to class attendance and active participation students will be expected to present cases weekly, to prepare two pieces of policy analysis in the form of a policy memo to a decision-maker, and to work on an issue analysis as part of a team. The team's analysis will culminate in a policy memo and live briefing to a "client." Prior to the group issue analysis all students will complete a "presolve" – a single iteration of analysis in the absence of data collection. In addition there will be a written homework assignment for a cost benefit case that will require doing some quantitative analysis using a spreadsheet. Since policy analysts in organizational settings rarely work independently, but more often work as part of a team, the final analysis and briefing will be a team project. The grading on the project will be a team grade and effectiveness in group dynamics will be included in the grade.

Grading

Grading will reflect the standards generally expected of a graduate level course. Grades of A will be reserved for those students who perform exceptionally on all aspects of the course. Grade of B will reflect adequate graduate level work. Any grade below a B will be an indication that the student is performing at less than an adequate graduate level.

The final grade for the course will be calculated on the following basis:
Class Participation and Preparation (including all homework)	25%
Two Policy Analysis Memoranda (20% each)	40%
Individual Presolve Exercise	10%
Final Team Presolve, Policy Analysis Memorandum, and Client Briefing	25%

Since our goal is to provide an opportunity for students to master the tools of policy analysis, you will have an opportunity to resubmit the first Policy Analysis Memo if you receive a grade of B or lower.

Any student who receives a grade on the first assignment of B or below must resubmit it after receiving comments and suggestions.

The course is designed to prepare you to be a professional. Therefore, all assignments must reflect professional standards of analysis, presentation, writing and timeliness. As in professional life, accurate spelling and grammar, and clear and concise writing are critical. To further simulate the professional world, assignments will not be accepted after they are due, except for students who receive my prior approval. (After all, what good is a policy memo a week after the budget is submitted or the votes have been cast?) An incomplete for the course will be granted only in highly unusual situations and only with a prior written request from you and approval by me.

Computer Proficiency

This course assumes that you can use a PC or Mac and understand how to do basic word processing, use a spreadsheet program, and search and retrieve information from electronic databases. All of your assignments must be word processed and all quantitative analysis must be done with a spreadsheet. If you have little or no prior computer experience, you should enroll in a workshop arranged by Milano's Office of Student Services or through the University's Office of Academic Technology. Students will be provided with additional in-class support and workshops on using spreadsheets (Excel) for financial analysis and cost/benefit analysis and additional sessions on the use of PowerPoint for presentations. The course also assumes that you understand how to do basic research using library and electronic resources. If you are unsure of your research skills, please solicit the help of the librarians in the library, or speak with me during office hours.

Note on Plagiarism and Academic Integrity

You are responsible for learning and understanding the rules on plagiarism and academic integrity. Breaking these rules is a serious offense with serious consequences. The rules are clearly spelled out in the University's policy. http://www.newschool.edu/gf/students/academic-honesty.htm

Professionalism Policies

This is a professional school. As such, you are expected to conduct yourselves in a professional manner. Please respect the following policies:

• Cell phones: You must turn off all cell phones and beepers before coming to class. If you are experiencing an emergency, and need to be reachable, please let me know before class and set your phone to silent. A phone ringing in class ensures its owner is dismissed immediately.

- Attendance and lateness: Class will begin and end promptly. If you are going to miss a class, or are going to be late or need to leave early, please let me know ahead of time. Students who come in late and leave early disrupt the class and miss important information.
- Email: You should have received notification from the university with your New School email address. This will operate as your address for this course; no supplementary addresses will be possible.

Class Schedule

Classes will normally meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 10:00 to 11:50 AM. In the last few weeks of the semester, however, due to the need to provide additional teaching support for student briefings, and in order to schedule briefings for each student team, additional time may be scheduled. These times may be necessary to accommodate group work, meet with a lab assistant or supervising faculty member. Additional time will be scheduled for student teams to meet with their faculty supervisors outside of class.

Course Readings

The following books are required reading for the course and are available for purchase at Barnes and Noble (5th Avenue and 18th Street):

Eugene Bardach, A Practical Guide for Policy Analysis: The Eightfold Path to More Effective Problem Solving. Washington, DC: CQ Press; 2nd edition (November 15, 2004)

John S. Hammond, Ralph L. Keeney, and Howard Raiffa, Smart Choices: A Practical Guide to Making Better Decisions. Boston: Harvard Business School Press, 1999.

Deborah Stone, Policy Paradox: The Art of Political Decision Making. Revised Edition. New York: WW Norton, 2002.

In addition to these books, the course will also require purchase of case studies and other materials published by the John F. Kennedy School of Government (KSG) at Harvard University. These materials can be purchased and downloaded on-line. Go to http://www.ksgcase.harvard.edu/. The cost for most cases is $3.45 for academic use. (Be sure to click on "Academic" for the price category; otherwise the cost is $6.45per case). Be sure to download the correct version of the assigned cases. It is easiest to access cases by using the site's "Quick Search" function.

Other readings must be downloaded from the course's website on Blackboard. Go to the "My New School" link on the New School web page to access Blackboard.

Other books of value for this course that students might like to own are:
