

Endangered Scholars Worldwide

IRAN

We deeply regret to announce that FARZAD KAMANGAR, the Kurdish teacher we featured in our Winter 2008 issue, was executed along with five other political prisoners on May 9, 2010, in Evin Prison, Tehran. All were accused of membership of the Party of Free Life of Kurdistan, a separatist group that the Iranian government views as “terrorist,” yet the executions are widely perceived to be a means of discouraging protest in the upcoming anniversary of last June’s contested elections.

We are pleased to report that since our last issue, several prisoners who were swept up in the crackdown following the June 2009 elections have been released, including SAEED LAYLAZ and EMADEDIN BAGHI. However, hundreds of the arrestees remain in prison, and Iranian courts continue to hand out excessive sentences. Thus, BAHAREH HEDAYAT and MILAD ASADI, both distinguished student activists, were recently sentenced to prison terms of nine and a half years and seven years, respectively, for crimes such as “propaganda against the regime” and “insulting the Supreme Leader.” The International Campaign for Human Rights in Iran reports that their sentencing took place in closed hearings in which they had no access to their lawyers.

Scholars featured in previous issues who remain in prison in Iran include: MAJID TAVAKOLI, a student leader arrested December 2009 and sentenced to eight and half years, whose recent highly publicized hunger strike succeeded in getting him transferred out of solitary confinement; DR. MOSTAFA ALAVI, an Iranian doctor and researcher sentenced to fifteen years’ imprisonment in August 2008 for “plotting against the regime”; DRS. ARASH and KAMIAR ALAEI, two AIDS researchers who were sentenced to three and six years, respectively, in January 2009 for “seeking to overthrow the government”; and BEHROOZ JAVID-TEHRANI, a student activist and prisoners’ rights campaigner who is currently being held in solitary confinement. All of these people are at risk of torture and need your support.
