Senior Project: Undertaking the Senior Project involves students working under the guidance of a faculty member in the Department of Psychology either in undertaking their own independent psychological research project or in collaborating on ongoing psychological research in the faculty member’s lab. Students should establish contact with a faculty member to discuss the possibility of undertaking a senior project with them, with this contact made at least one semester before commencement of the Senior Work. The Lang Student Advisor is available to help in coordinating the senior work, such as in helping students make contact with a faculty lab.

Graduate Course: Students may consult with the Lang Student Advisor for guidance about which graduate course may make most sense to take. Students are advised, if possible, to avoid enrolling in one of the highly competitive lecture courses offered in the MA program and instead to enroll in a graduate seminar. Students must obtain permission from the faculty member teaching the graduate course that they plan to take.
