Enrique Peruzzotti is assistant professor of Political Science at the University Torcuato Di Tella in Buenos Aires and researcher of CONICET. Peruzzotti’s research analyzes the emergence of new forms of civil society politics in Latin America. He has published dozens of articles on evolving concepts of democracy, advocacy politics, accountability and civil society in academic journals. His most recent publication is Participatory Innovations and Representative Democracy in Latin America (Woodrow Wilson Press/Johns Hopkins UP, 2009), which he edited with Andrew Seele.
